Where Gratitude Lives

Thanksgiving may come once a year, but gratitude is something we can live every day.

We're thankful for the everyday moments that make our communities feel like home – the smiles shared in hallways, the stories told over coffee, and the quiet acts of care that remind us how deeply we're connected to one another.

To our dedicated team and wonderful residents: thank you for making our communities more than places to live; each of you make them places to belong.

Together at the Table

At Grandview Towers, Thanksgiving reflected the same warmth and connection that can be felt across our communities.

Residents and team members gathered for a festive brunch that brought out the best parts of community life: stories traded across tables, the sound of dishes being passed around, and the simple joy of being together.

It was one of those gatherings that reminds us why sharing a table matters; it's where connection grows, one conversation at a time.

More Than Just Pie

Residents and Grade 12 students from Rutland Senior Secondary shared a day of friendship and fun at Sun Pointe Village.

From picking apples in the orchard to peeling, mixing, and baking from scratch, the day was full of laughter, teamwork, and new experiences. One resident even picked her very first apple – a simple reminder that it's never too late to try something new.

The afternoon ended with apple pie fresh from the oven, and a day that turned out more special than anyone expected.

Every Day, Together

At Evergreen Community, Inglewood Care Centre, and Smith Creek Village, three couples celebrated the beauty of a lifetime together – love stories spanning 65 and 70 years of marriage.

Surrounded by friends, family, and team members, stories filled the room as these couples reflected on their marriages. They spoke of the small moments, the challenges, and the joy of building a shared life. In their words, you could hear what their years together have meant.

The life they've shared continues to inspire those around them – a reminder that with time, love doesn't fade; it deepens. And every day together is something to celebrate.
